The overall theme of the Conference "Brokering Knowledge" will be broken down into subtopics, with a total of thirteen sessions, one for each journal. In this way, the various areas can be adapted to the different streams of research and editorial policies of each journal and editor participating at the Conference.
The journal editor corresponding to each area will open the session outlining the Trends in the future for his/her journal. Authors will then go on to present the papers chosen for each session.
One of the results of the Conference is to select papers that will constitute special issues in each of the journals involved in the thirteen Sessions-Tracks (and consequently special issues) for 2012. So, depending on the quality of submissions, the best papers will be published in the special issues of these SSCI journals. Such a process makes this and subsequent Conferences organized by the Editors´ Network of the International Network of Business and Management Journals (INBAM) quite unique. The issues/special sections will be published the year after the Conference.

Call for Papers

Full papers should be submitted to the track chair related to the topic (see the list above). Those papers that do not reach the required standards of quality and rigour demanded by these journals, in terms of theoretical framework and methodology, will not be accepted for presentation at the Conference. However, during the INBAM Conference, a parallel section will take place, in poster format, devoted to studies already in progress though not yet in the final stages. In this section the authors will be gathering suggestions in order to improve their work or look for partners willing to collaborate in the research and production of the final paper.
Papers should be highly relevant, and consider the research focus favoured by the Conference journals.
