

Faculty Position Opening

Located in Madrid's historical center, the University College of Financial Studies (CUNEF) was established in 1973 by the Spanish Banking Association, with the objective to train future leaders in the areas of Finance and Business Administration. CUNEF is affiliated to Complutense University of Madrid, and offers undergraduate curricula in Business Administration and Business Law, as well as graduate curricula in Finance and Banking.

CUNEF is currently seeking candidates to fill several full-time, tenure-track faculty positions at the Assistant Professor level. Successful candidates will be required to teach and to actively publish their research. Teaching may be both in English and in Spanish.

While we encourage applications from all fields in Management and Finance, special attention will be given to Strategic Management, Entrepreneurship, International Management, Business Economics, Finance, Marketing and Industrial Sociology.

The positions will start in October 2010. In order to be considered, applicants should have completed a PhD, or be scheduled to do so before being appointed. Applications should be received by April 30th, 2010. Applicants should e-mail a cover letter, curriculum vita, teaching statement and past teaching records, three reference letters, and at least one original research paper to Begoña Menéndez Rodríguez at convocatoriadocente@cunef.edu.

*CUNEF is an affirmative action / equal opportunity employer
